

About These Activities . . .

Here is a WakerUppers collection served up expressly for younger children. Keeping young hands in mind, we have made the answer spaces a little more ample than they are in our other WakerUpper products. We have also reduced the number of activities on each page.

The activities themselves are a lively mix of challenges that are just plain fun to do. Beyond the fun, though, are ambitious explorations in a variety of skill areas—analytical thinking, flexible thinking, language development and others.

There are many ways to use these activities. True to the name WakerUppers, you can give them to kids to start the day. You may also use them as a way to give early-finishers something productive to do. Or you can have them work on them throughout the day, during spare moments.

Some of the challenges here are not easy, especially for young kids. Encourage them to keep at it, though. When a solution comes ... bravo!
